

Indiana has initiated a very effective telephone privacy act and I am requesting that the FCC be careful that none of its actions impair the effectiveness of Indiana's act. Indiana's act was easy to subscribe to and has reduced the number of solicitation phone calls we receive to a minimum (I'd estimate the average to be less than one a week). I certainly appreciate the FCC's attention to the issue of disruptive solicitation telephone calls but hope you will be supportive of those state efforts which have already proven effective in addressing this issue.